

In September 2017, the City of Raleigh announced the opening of the Raleigh Pathways Center with a mission to connect local young adults to services, training and other resources meant to provide clear pathways to career success. The Pathways Center is an access point to high-growth career information, training, job and career opportunities, and supportive services. The Center is managed by Cathey J. Ector-Cox with the City of Raleigh Department of Housing and Neighborhoods Community Engagement Division. Veronica Creech, who leads the Office of Economic Development and Innovation has designated Jenn Bosser from the ED&I team to serve on the Pathway Center's Steering Committee to assist the progress and facilitation of the Pathways Center's programs, trainings, and services.
